Meta taps new chief security officer from Qualtrics, PayPal

Meta Platforms Inc. tapped a veteran cybersecurity executive to serve as its next chief information security officer, filling a key opening after its former CISO announced plans to depart last month. Assaf Keren will join Meta this week from software platform Qualtrics, where he spent the past two years in the top security post. Before that he held the same role at PayPal Holdings Inc. Keren will succeed Meta's Guy Rosen, who will remain CISO through a transition period for several months before leaving the company later this year, a spokesperson said. Rosen joined Meta in 2013 when it was called Facebook.

Cyber fraud: Google says only one app was on Play Store

Google on Wednesday said it has initiated an investigation after being alerted about alleged cyber fraud cases involving investment apps and found that only one of them was on the Play Store and complies with its financial services policy. This assumes significance as Hyderabad Cyber Crime Police has named the "Head of Google in India" in three cyber fraud cases alleging that fraudsters cheated them in the name of high returns.

Advanced Micro Devices will sell Anthropic tens of billions of dollars' worth of AI servers and invest as much as $5 billion in the Claude maker, in a deal that would strengthen its foothold in a market dominated by rival Nvidia.

Ayr Energy files counter against Zetwerk in US court

PEERZADA ABRAR
Bengaluru, 22 July

Months after Zetwerk accused Ayr Energy and its founder of using stolen confidential information to build a rival business, the US-based transformer startup has filed counter-claims of its own.

Ayr Energy Inc, a US-based maker of custom power transformers, has sued India's Zetwerk Manufacturing Businesses and its affiliates, alleging they orchestrated a scheme to steal proprietary information and falsely market the resulting products. The lawsuit also names Zetwerk Manufacturing USA Inc, Unimacts Global LLC, and Kryfs Power Components as defendants.

Ayr, the California-based company, is seeking to block imports of the transformers into the US through a complaint before the United States International Trade Commission (USITC). In a separate filing before the Texas Business Court, it is seeking at least $1 billion in damages, along with punitive damages, disgorgement of profits, corrective advertising, and injunctive relief.

According to filings made before the USITC and the Texas Business Court, Zetwerk dispatched an oper-

Case file

- Ayr Energy alleges Zetwerk orchestrated a scheme to steal proprietary information and falsely market the resulting products
- Lawsuit names Zetwerk Manufacturing USA, Unimacts Global and KRYFS Power Components
- Soon after the allegationm, Zetwerk began marketing custom transformer capabilities
- Ayr Energy seeks at least $1 billion in damages

ative who obtained a position at Ayr under false pretences and accessed Ayr's confidential information without authorisation. The operative allegedly left after only six weeks of employment and later resurfaced at Zetwerk as head of a new transformer delivery business. Soon after, the filings allege, Zetwerk began marketing custom transformer capabilities it had never previously possessed and launched online advertising that traded on the Ayr Energy name itself.

The filings allege trade secret misappropriation, false and misleading advertising, willful trademark infringement, knowing participation in a breach of fiduciary duty, fraud, civil conspiracy, civil theft, conversion, and unfair competition. "The USITC complaint asks the commission to institute an investigation and issue a limited exclusion order barring the accused transformers from entry into the US, together with cease-and-desist orders halting their marketing, sale, and distribution," Ayr Energy said.

Zetwerk said the complaint came after Ayr's own claim against the manufacturing platform failed to gain traction. "It was withdrawn after it found no traction in a California court," Zetwerk said. The company added that it had filed the first case in Texas in October 2025, seeking $100 million in damages. "Ayr's attempt to get that case dismissed was rejected by the court," Zetwerk said.

HCLTech likely to build its first India data centre in Odisha

HEMANT KUMAR ROUT
Bhubaneswar, 22 July

Leading IT services company HCLTech has proposed to establish an artificial intelligence (AI)-optimised data centre along with a global development centre (GDC) in Bhubaneswar with an investment of around ₹730 crore.

The proposed facility assumes significance as it could become HCLTech's first owned data centre in India. While the company has long offered data centre-related services, including infrastructure management, Cloud transformation and managed services for global clients, it did not have its own data centre business.

"HCLTech will sign a memorandum of understanding (MoU) with the Odisha government for the proposed data centre and a delivery centre in Bhubaneswar on Friday. It would be done in the presence of Chief Minister Mohan Charan Majhi and Chairperson of HCLTech Roshni Nadar Malhotra," a senior official told Business Standard on Wednesday.

The project, approved by the Odisha government, is expected to strengthen the state's digital infra-

Plan sheet

Near completion

- RBI data centre and enterprise computing facility (A ₹169 cr high-security facility built at Info Valley)

Proposed facilities

- Hyperscale data centre by Adani Group (A ₹800 crore project proposed to drive cloud computing and AI workloads)
- State Data Centre 2.0 (A state-backed backup and cybersecurity centre approved for ₹266.48 crore)
- AI-optimised data centre and GDC by HCLTech (A ₹730 crore project to come up at Info Valley)

IT ministry to meet experts on children's digital safety today

AASHISH ARYAN
New Delhi, 22 July

The Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology has invited technology policy advocacy groups, non-governmental organisations, child safety and other experts to discuss online children and youth safety, prevention of child sexual exploitation and abuse material, and overall digital well-being of users below the age of 18 years on Thursday, sources said.

The IT Ministry also wants to understand the impact of social media bans across the globe, and whether they have achieved the intended results, the sources added.

"We have to study the experiences of other countries in this regard. It is not necessary that a regulation model that has worked in Australia or the UK works here as well. The point to discuss is if there are other measures that will work for us," a senior government official said.

The meeting comes shortly after the ministry took cognisance of the presence of CSEAM content on social media and messaging platforms, and issued strict instructions to all intermediaries to immediately take down all such content.
