Why is every coconut suddenly expensive?

-: Pooja S -:

If you've bought a coconut in Chennai over the past few weeks, you've probably noticed it. The price has quietly climbed. Tender coconuts cost more than they did a few months ago. Coconut oil has become costlier. Even a simple coconut used for cooking or a temple offering is no longer as inexpensive as it once was.

In Chennai's retail markets this week, one kilogram of coconut is selling between Rs.69 and Rs.82, compared to around Rs.63 just weeks ago - a sharp increase that consumers are feeling every day. Whether it is a roadside tender coconut vendor or a neighbourhood grocery store, the humble coconut has suddenly become one of the latest food items to witness a noticeable price surge.

For many families, it feels like just another price rise. But behind that coconut is a much bigger story - one that stretches from Tamil Nadu's farms to climate change, global food markets and even Artificial Intelligence.

As the world observes today World Coconut Day on September 2, India's coconut is telling the story of how technology and climate are reshaping one of the country's oldest crops.

Tamil Nadu is one of India's largest coconut-producing states, and coconut is woven into everyday life across South India. It is food, oil, medicine, livelihood and culture. Yet farmers across several coconut-growing regions have faced an unusually difficult year. Erratic rainfall, prolonged heatwaves, water shortages and pest attacks have affected production, reducing supply while demand continues to rise. That imbalance has pushed coconut prices upward across many markets.

But climate is only part of the story. A quiet technological revolution is arriving in coconut farms. The next worker helping farmers may not be another labourer - it may be AI.

Across India, researchers and agri-tech companies are using AI-powered tools to monitor coconut plantations from the sky. Drones equipped with high-resolution cameras can detect signs of disease long before they become visible to the human eye. Satellite imagery helps identify water stress across plantations, while soil sensors measure moisture levels and recommend exactly when irrigation is needed.

Imagine a farmer receiving a message that says, "Tree number 52 needs water today. Tree number 19 shows early signs of pest infestation." That is no longer science fiction. AI is beginning to provide precisely that kind of support.

It is also helping solve one of farming's oldest problems - uncertainty. Instead of waiting for pests to spread or guessing rainfall patterns, AI analyses weather forecasts, soil health and crop conditions to help farmers make faster decisions. That means fewer losses, better yields and potentially more stable prices for consumers.

The timing could not be more important.

The global food system has become increasingly fragile. Climate change has disrupted harvests across continents. Heatwaves have damaged crops, while floods and droughts have affected agricultural production in many countries. Food is no longer discussed only as a farming issue; it is now part of conversations on economic resilience and national security.

India is also encouraging a smarter approach to agriculture through digital farming, precision irrigation and climate-resilient crops. Coconut farmers are gradually becoming part of this transition, using technology not to replace traditional knowledge but to strengthen it.

There is an important lesson hidden inside today's rising coconut prices. Every extra rupee reflects changing weather patterns, stressed farms, rising cultivation costs and the growing need for innovation in agriculture.

World Coconut Day 2026 is therefore about much more than celebrating a tropical fruit. It is about recognising that the future of farming will depend on how well India combines centuries-old agricultural wisdom with modern technology.

The next time you hold a coconut, remember that it carries more than water or oil. It carries the story of climate, farmers, technology and a future where Artificial Intelligence may help protect one of India's most iconic trees and perhaps keep it affordable on our tables.

Innovation in Schizophrenia research gets focus at meet held in City

Chennai, Sept 2: The 12th edition of the International Conference on Schizophrenia (ICoNS XII), organised by the Schizophrenia Research Foundation (India), was held from August 20 to 22 at The Saveria Hotel in Chennai, marking 25 years of the international conference.

The three-day conference, themed “Innovations in Mental Health: Research and Practice,” brought together researchers, clinicians, mental-health professionals and experts from India and abroad to discuss emerging developments in schizophrenia research and mental-health practice.

The conference featured pre-conference workshops, plenary sessions, symposia, poster presentations, the 6th Dr Sarada Menon Oration and a Spotlight Debate. The scientific programme covered a wide range of subjects, including recent-onset psychosis, physical health, youth mental health, lived experience, digital mental health, supported employment, recovery, cognitive impairment, integrative medicine, neurocognitive research, neuromodulation, early psychosis and community mental-health interventions.

The inaugural ceremony and Silver Jubilee celebration on August 20 was attended by Dr Ashoo Grover, Scientist G and Head of the Delivery Research Division, ICMR, as Chief Guest, and Dr Darez Ahamed, IAS, Secretary to the Government of Tamil Nadu, Health and Family Welfare Department, as Guest of Honour.

The event also saw the announcement of the STELAR Award and the 6th Dr Sarada Menon Oration, delivered by internationally renowned psychiatrist and neuroscientist Professor Matcheri S. Keshavan of Harvard Medical School.

A major highlight of the conference was the Spotlight Debate on “Renaming Schizophrenia,” moderated by Professor Keshavan. The discussion examined perspectives on diagnosis and identity, as well as the implications of language used in mental-health terminology.

The conference marked the Silver Jubilee of ICoNS, which has evolved into an international forum for advancing knowledge, research and clinical practice in schizophrenia and mental health.

Dr Sridhar Vaitheswaran, Director, SCARF, said the conference provided an important platform for interdisciplinary and international exchange on emerging challenges and innovations in mental-health care.

Charlie takes part in Insurance Week celebration

Chennai, Sept 2: Insurance Week celebrations of the Life Insurance Corporation of India (LIC) are being held in Chennai, with a series of programmes highlighting the corporation's seven-decade-long journey and achievements.

M. Rajakumar, Senior Divisional Manager, Chennai Division II, presided over the proceedings. Film star Kalaimamani Dr V.T.M. Charlie, well-known humorist and character artiste, was the Chief Guest.

Tracing LIC's growth since its establishment in 1956, officials said the corporation, which began with an investment of Rs 5 crore, has grown into a major financial institution with an asset base of around Rs 60 lakh crore and 30 crore policyholders as of 2026.

Chennai Division II has added 35,600 new policyholders between April and August 2026, generating premium revenue of Rs 231 crore, officials said.

In his presidential address, M. Rajakumar outlined the achievements of Chennai Division II and highlighted its performance with key figures.

A. Lourd Selvakumar, Marketing Manager, Chennai Division II, explained various initiatives undertaken by the division to strengthen LIC's performance and expand its customer base. Addressing the gathering, Charlie said he was a proud LIC policyholder and recalled his long association with the corporation. Referring to his passion for cinema, he said, “Cinema is my passion more than being my profession,” a remark he had made while receiving his doctorate in Chicago.

Dr Charlie also highlighted LIC's achievements over the past 70 years and wished the corporation continued success and service to the public for more than another 100 years.

The Insurance Week celebrations will continue till September 7, 2026, with various programmes being organised as part of the observance.
